Self and Time Management for Students on 10.05.

Many students are under great time pressure due to the high number of hours and numerous tasks they often have to complete at the same time.

It is not uncommon for students to pull an all-nighter at the end of the semester to cope with the learning material. And for the next semester, they have good intentions to be more organized.

But people often slip back into old habits. Effective time management is not only crucial in professional life. Knowing how to manage your time effectively is also important for students because it allows them to complete more in less time. As a result, you can take time off and enjoy the important things in life without feeling guilty

This in-person seminar is taught in English and covers self-management methods and time management techniques to help students develop their strategies. It complements the eLearning modules #studywithplanG Self-Management and #studywithplanG Time Management offered by Pre-Studyplus. Attendees can use the break between parts 1 and 2 to test their self-management strategies.
